CHOICES. When reading How it Works, I am always struck by the sentence "we stood at the turning point". Standing at the turning point, especially in early sobriety, can be very difficult when faced with choices. Many decisions come to me throughout the day, some small and some major, and today I am the one responsible for those choices. Then there is the sentence that follows "we ask his protection and care with complete abandon" - I then pray for the will of my god and the power to carry it out. If the choice is right - life is good. If not - I've found the experience has led to growth.
